It was another lovely week in the P3 classroom!

The children are definitely relaxing into our routine and we are loving all the little conversations and giggles that are bubbling up during the day. We encourage you to build upon these blossoming friendships by planning playdates outside of school.

Thursday morning was so beautiful that we couldn't help but go outside for a spontaneous nature walk around the campus. We looked at the many ways that we can recognize how "Fall is in the air" as we noticed the changing colors of the leaves. We visited the garden and said hello to the resident scarecrow, and we thanked him for his service. We noticed the weather was getting colder and how it seemed to be a blustery day. Mary and I were delighted when some of the children started to "whistle" along with the wind. Pretty soon the entire class was pretending to be leaves twirling in the wind, as they all started howling into the sky. It was wonderful to see the class embrace both the moment and the season. Your children are a joy!

Next week we will continue with our Halloween crafts with all sorts of ghosts and creepy crawlies. We will exercise those important muscles in our arms and fingers with a plethora of cutting, gluing, and coloring projects. And we look forward to another week with the the children, as we allow their enthusiasm light the way.

The fun awaits!
